Call for Proposals:
ISERP Interdisciplinary Graduate Student Seminar (IIGSS)
$500 honorarium per presentation

The theme for the Fall 2022 IIGSS is Connection. The theme was chosen to highlight political, social, and economic connections across an interdependent world, as well as to highlight projects exploring connections across disciplines. During this semester there will be four presentations, taking place between October 7th and December 9th. Final dates and times will be announced closer to the first presentation. We expect seminars to take place in-person in accordance with University guidance, provided campus risk levels remain low. However, we will honor requests from presenters to present virtually, and all seminars will retain a virtual component to allow those who cannot be on campus to participate. The presenters will speak for the first half-hour, and then the remainder of the session will be dedicated to questions and conversation.

Interdisciplinarity has long been encouraged among the social sciences as a means of rethinking contemporary social questions that exceed the scope of traditional disciplinary approaches. Yet, there is still little consensus about what interdisciplinarity might look like and what its practical limits and possibilities might be. This yearlong seminar, sponsored by the Institute for Social and Economic Research and Policy, seeks to foster a conversation across the social science communities at Columbia to discuss the diverse ways in which interdisciplinarity can be mobilized. The goal of the seminar series is to explore how interdisciplinary approaches can contribute to and enrich traditional disciplines and what such interdisciplinarity demands from them.

This Call for Proposals is open to graduate students in the social sciences and related disciplines at Columbia University. We seek contributions from scholars who are actively trying to incorporate interdisciplinary approaches and methods in their work, and who centralize the interdisciplinary component in their project proposal. Students have the opportunity to present papers on a range of topics and methods including, but not limited to, the social sciences, humanities, arts and culture, policy, and security. In addition to providing the opportunity to present works-in-progress, the seminar will foster discussion across disciplines and fields, creating opportunities for collaborative research.

The 2022-2023 submission guidelines are as follows:

1. In order to qualify, papers should further the efforts of ISERP and the IIGSS to develop collaborative and interdisciplinary research and methods. Collaborative projects by students in different disciplines are especially encouraged.
2. To apply, please email applications to the IIGSS Committee at iserp-iigss@columbia.edu by Friday, September 16th, 2022 at 5:00PM EST. Final decisions for papers to be presented at the workshop will be announced by September 28th, 2022.
3. Applications should include:
 1. A Research Proposal. Research proposals (500-1000 words) should focus primarily on the interdisciplinary method at hand and include a brief description of how the project will enhance traditional disciplinary approaches and benefit from participation in the IIGSS. Research proposals will be judged by the IIGSS committee composed of doctoral students from 5 social science departments. Therefore, ensure that research proposals can be understood by those outside of your own field.
 2. Curriculum Vitae or Resume.

Selected presenters will be encouraged to emphasize in their presentations the way in which a need for interdisciplinarity emerged from the consideration of their object of study. In particular, they will be encouraged to discuss how specific analytical and methodological challenges were overcome and dealt with by recurring to methods and theories coming from allied disciplines different from their own. Given the online format of the presentations, presenters are highly encouraged to prepare powerpoint slides (these do not need to be included in the original submission). If selected, presenters are also expected to attend the other seminars in the series.

Please format all filenames using “Lastname - Proposal” and “Lastname - CV” (e.g., “DiPrete - Proposal”, “DiPrete and Connelly - Proposal”, or “DiPrete - CV”).

A $500 honorarium will be provided for selected presentations.

The ISERP Interdisciplinary Graduate Student Seminar (IIGSS) seeks to promote inquiry that crosses geographic, temporal, or disciplinary boundaries, by creating new opportunities for dialogue among graduate students in the social sciences, and by exploring new methodological and research approaches. The IIGSS is organized by a committee of doctoral students. The Committee consists of: Antara Chakrabarti (Anthropology), Zheng Fu (Sociology), Colleen Larkin (Political Science), Wendy Morrison (Economics), Yingchuan Yang (History).
